

Get Charged Up for National Battery Day 2019

Annual awareness day drives consumer engagement and education of battery recycling across U.S.

Batteries power our everyday lives and provide many conveniences. While we use batteries and products with batteries daily, many individuals don't know how to properly dispose of them once they reach their end-of-life. The answer: responsible recycling.

February 18th marks National Battery Day, the perfect time to jump-start your battery recycling efforts. We're proud to partner with Call2Recycle on this annual awareness day to spotlight the importance and ease of battery recycling.

Get Charged Up on National Battery Day by collecting your old household batteries and taking them to a Call2Recycle drop-off location. You can also visit participating retail partners like The Home Depot and Lowe's, which accept rechargeable batteries and cellphones.

Green up your community and spread the word about National Battery Day 2019! To access promotional materials and information, visit Call2Recycle's National Battery Day page. To learn more about safe battery handling, management and recycling, visit Call2Recycle.